from Canada

The second good news story is about hockey sticks and a Canadian hamburger restaurant chain called Harvey's. When customers need to pay at Harvey's drive thrus, the card machine is handed to them while being attached to a hockey stick. This lets staff and customers maintain physical distance from each other during the coronavirus pandemic. I think this is a creative way for businesses to be able to safely hand things to customers. Also, because hockey sticks are one of Canada's iconic cultural symbols, this unique story is something that would happen only in Canada.
